J. T. HINTON,

THE ALPHABET'S MEETING.

The alphabet met and said that "they were not arranged in a proper way." A had stood at the head too long. It was not right; it was utterly wrong. "For you all know and can plainly see that place belongs to me," said G. "You take the head, indeed!" said L. "That place is meant for my dear K." "But, but, but! Well, well, well! I'll stand there myself then," said L. "Excuse us, please, we think that we have a word to say," said B, C, D.

"Suppose you have," said F as he softly whispered a word to E. "What'll you say?" said F and G. "We've listened in silence to all of you and now will 'head' you," said F and G. "Our impression is, you had better try," then angrily spoke both H and I. "How rude and coarse!" said R, S, T. "The 'sirs' of some!" said U and V. "Would drive one mad," said W, X, Y, Z. But, after all, the letters still stand as at the head, at the foot &c.

TALK OF MARRIAGE.

It is Proper For the Man, but Not For the Girl, Apparently.

A man may remember on his intention to marry at some indefinite future time, when prudence or other considerations may make it possible or advisable, without having, as a rule, to run the gamut of a chorus of impertinent and stupid would be witty remarks. But should a girl be bold enough, or rather, natural and simple enough, to say the same thing what would be the result? Why, every one knows that she would be promptly sneered out of countenance.

And why? Is it immodest for a woman to express a determination to enter into a state which we are being continually reminded is a natural and honorable state, while it is modest and proper for a man to do so? Such a distinction would never be drawn except for the "cheapness" to which reference has been made.

If a man wants to marry, he can marry. If the first woman he asks refuses him, he has only to ask a second or perhaps a third or fourth. It would be safe to guarantee that within a month any man of fairly respectable life and position and appearance would be cared to make the experiment of matrimony in his own class, could marry probably a woman much superior to himself.

But what about the girl who intends to marry "some day"? Is she not in a very different position from the man? Here is a girl of good character—much better than the man's, probably—average intelligence, average good looks. Theoretically she is free to marry whom she will, but is she? If she receives one distinct offer of marriage, she has had more than her share, according to the probable average.

The fact that by an unwritten law a woman must not take, and, indeed, does not want to take, the initiative has very little to do with the extremely limited choice which modern conditions impose upon English women.—Nineteenth Century.

Swallowed Two Pounds of Stone.
Stones do not form part of the recognized diet of the cormorant, but one of these birds in the National Zoological park in Washington had a craving which could be satisfied only by eating two pounds of stones. The keeper's attention was attracted to the bird because after having once sat down it couldn't get up. He was picked up, and then the stones were heard rattling inside of him. An official connected with the park decided that something must be done, and he promptly cut the cormorant open and relieved him of his burden. One of the stones, of irregular shape, was 3 1/2 inches long. The incision was sewed up, and for five days the bird got along all right, the wound healing finely, but at the end of that time the cormorant grew restive and pulled out the stitches with his hooked bill. As a consequence of opening up the wound he died.

Artificial Stone.
Quarrymen and stone dressers will probably be gradually crowded out of their occupation by the use of artificial stone. In the manufacture of this stone the sand is heated and the cement added to the amount of 12 per cent of the mixture. The steel molds are filled with the dry material and moved into an immense cylinder, which is closed and bolted. Boiling water is then turned in under pressure sufficient to force it all through the sand and the molds. The cement slacks, but the steel molds do not permit any expansion to occur, and the stone is formed and dried under an immense pressure. The result is a very hard stone, which can be supplied in shapes desired and much cheaper than the natural stone.

Noncooking Restaurants.
Odd as it may appear to dwellers in small cities, some of the down town restaurants of New York are in buildings in which no cooking is allowed. Some of the busiest of the midday restaurants purchase all their meats and stews already cooked and merely heat them through again before serving them to patrons. This branch of the restaurant business has reached such proportions that the mere operation of cooking for such places has become an established business, and owners of ovens thrive at it.—New York Sun.

WIRELESS TELEGRAPHY

Success of Victor Popp's New System Proved.

WILL GO THROUGH THE GROUND.

Earth Waves to Be Used Rather Than Aerial—Distance No Object, and Communication With America Only Matter of Detail—Its Safety in Time of War.

Some exceedingly interesting descriptions of the new system of wireless telegraphy were given recently at Le Vesinet, a little suburban hamlet on the St. Germain-en-Laye road, before 50 or 60 spectators, principally representatives of the Paris press.

The inventors or discoverers of this system are Colonel Pilevsky, an engineer officer in the Russian army, and M. Victor Popp, a well known electrical engineer, whose name has been attached to several useful and valuable inventions, says the Paris correspondent of the New York Herald. Within the narrow limits imposed by the experiments the other day they were a complete success.

Although the electrical installation at Le Vesinet is of the most primitive and temporary character, a number of messages were dispatched by the transmitting instrument in a villa in the Parisian suburb and received in another villa situated about 900 meters distant without the slightest hitch.

One striking feature about M. Popp's system is its extreme simplicity. No tall masts are required, as are necessary with the Marconi method. It is terrestrial rather than aerial—that is to say, the electric waves follow the surface of the earth. There is, consequently, nothing spectacular in the apparatus. It consists simply of two electrodes separated by a distance that varies according to the distance of the place with which it is desired to communicate. The negative is placed on a sheet of glass as insulator on the surface. The positive is buried in the earth at a depth of from three and a half to four meters. These two electrodes are connected to the transmitting apparatus.

The same arrangement is followed at the receiving station. This is all that is necessary for the dispatch and registration of messages, as was conclusively proved by M. Popp.

The most astounding claim made by M. Popp for his system is that its rapidity of action is virtually unlimited, wireless telegraphy with America, for example, being merely a matter of detail, such as the distance separating the electrodes and the energy of the transmitting apparatus.

In addition M. Popp has devised a sort of reflector (isolator) that allows of the electric waves being compelled to travel in a given direction. The possibilities contained in M. Popp's discovery are incalculable. In the first place, the apparatus is so simple that it is not liable to get out of order. It is so transportable that four men can establish a telegraph station in thorough working order within an hour anywhere. This in the case of a city like Paris is a desideratum not to be despised. Furthermore, the absence of the tall masts necessary with the Marconi system is an invaluable advance, as they would infallibly betray to an enemy the fact that a wireless telegraph station was in the neighborhood.

STUDY OF AGRICULTURE.

General Hughes Suggests Experiments by Company Commanders.

General Hughes, commanding the department of the Visayas, Philippine Islands, has issued a general order for the encouragement of agricultural pursuits in his command, says the Washington Star. "Inasmuch as conditions," says the general, "warrant the assumption that the troops will enjoy greater permanency in location than formerly the department commander invites attention of company commanders to the fact that excellent vegetables ought to be grown in these islands for at least eight months of the year.

"As those which do well during one portion of the year may be burned by the sun or rotted through excessive wet in another it is advised that experiments from month to month, inquiry of the best local market in the vicinity and a persistent effort be made to prepare the data for the comfort of those who may come hereafter should our stay not be sufficiently long for us to reap the benefit of our labors. The subsistence department has a moderate supply of seeds of various kinds, which will be distributed to those making application to the chief commissary of the department."

Preservation of Fresh Fruits.

According to the state department of agriculture, the German consul general at Sydney reports that the agricultural department of Victoria has recently made experiments with reference to the preservation of fresh fruits. Pears and peaches packed in the ordinary boxes for shipment were subjected to the vapors of hydrocyanic gas. The fruits were then taken out of the boxes and separately wrapped in tissue paper. Some of them were again treated with the gas, and the whole lot was placed in a dry-proof at a temperature of 40 degrees and kept there for seven weeks. When the fruits were taken out, they were in an excellent state of preservation, especially those that had been treated with the gas a second time. Not only the pears, but the peaches, held fast to the trees, retained their freshness and showed no decayed spots, as the germs had all been killed by the gas.

Eczema, salt rheum, tetter, chafing, itching, and all skin troubles are quickly cured by DeWitt's White Hazel Salve. The certain cure.—W. T. Brooks.

JOHNSON'S HOLD UP

Mr. Johnson didn't like footpads. One night it was particularly dark and gloomy when he became aware of the figure of two men leaning against an old shed some 500 feet about it. There was no mistake about it. The men were there for business. Mr. Johnson hesitated to cross the street, as it might show suspicion and fear on his part. So he jammed his hat down tight on his head, buttoned up his coat securely, took a long breath and started in to run the gamut, ready to take to his heels at the first sign of danger. The men stood motionless, however, until he was within a few feet; then they suddenly separated. Tom Johnson's heart gave a great thump, but he kept valiantly on, determined to outrun them, but just as he came well abreast of them they precipitated themselves upon him, one on either side. Tom gathered all his strength together and springing, raised his arms, flung off his assailants and with a mighty leap started down the street.

When loss of breath finally compelled him to stop, his hat was gone and his coat unbuttoned and flying open with the wind. He felt for his watch. It was gone. Now, Tom Johnson was not a coward, and his wrath at the dexterity of the thieves immediately rose to the boiling point. There was no going home then. He would go back and get the watch if they killed him. As he rapidly retraced his steps he saw him in the distance, and they apparently saw him, for they quickly disappeared in a convenient doorway. Tom Johnson in his present mood, however, was not to be dismayed or felled. He marched on bravely, and in a few minutes he was in the street, where the two men were crouching. "See here," he said, "you blankety blank thieves, hand over that watch quick, or there'll be trouble. Do you hear?"

Instead of the cold muzzle of a revolver against his face he felt rather than saw a watch pressed against his hand. Surprise could have knocked him over with a feather, but he kept that emotion locked within his own breast and marched triumphantly home to his wife, who, alarmed at the lateness of the hour, was waiting in an agony of apprehension. He left himself with his latchkey. His heart filled with unholty pride. Amanda was waiting at the top of the hall stairs, the candle in her hand lighting up a face all aglow with anxiety and eyes red with weeping.

"Tom," she cried, "is it you? Oh, what is the matter?"

"Matter?" said Tom, who could afford now to be a little overbearing and impatient at the silliness and fears of weak women. "Nothing's the matter. Why didn't you go to bed long ago?"

As he came into the glare of the candle her face expressed a new fear.

"Tom Johnson, where have you been? Your face is dripping with perspiration, and just look at your tie."

Then he hurriedly told of his night's adventures and was indulging in natural self-felicitation on the discomfort of the robbers when Amanda exclaimed:

"Oh, but, Tom, you didn't have your watch with you today, dear. You left it here in the pillow this morning."

No lightning change artist ever equalled Mr. Johnson in the rapidity with which his countenance fell from 90 in the shade to 20 below zero. He looked at the watch in his pocket. Sure enough, it was none of his. There was no use denying the fact. He had played a daring hold up game and come out a winner.

"Oh, Tom," cried his wife, "will they send you to jail?"

"Don't be a ninny," said Tom. "I don't know why I didn't think of not taking my watch this morning."

"Why, couldn't you see when they gave this to you that it wasn't a bit like yours? It's a great deal nicer, that's what it is, and they'll lock you up for robbery. I know they will," warned Mrs. J.

"Oh, confound it all! Quit your crying. I'm going back and find those fellows this minute."

"Oh, no, no! Not at this time of night. They'll kill you sure."

"Amanda, you go to bed and go to sleep. I guess if I can hold up two big, husky fellows once I can take care of them again."

The men were gone when Mr. Johnson reached the spot, but the dark doorway where the robbery was committed turned out to be the rear entrance to a saloon, so he interviewed the saloon keeper.

"Yes," said that individual, "there were two men in here awhile ago, a little the worse for wear, who said some villain had been them up."

"Who were they? Do you know them?" cried the anxious Tom.

"No. They don't live around these parts. They were fine looking gents. Been visiting near here and got loaded with a little too hard liquor."

The next day there appeared in the papers an ad. something to this effect: Will the two gentlemen who were held up Tuesday on — street, near Avenue K, communicate with the undersigned. They will learn some thing to their advantage. L. S. P. P. P.

To which request no answer was ever received, and Tom Johnson is still the possessor of two timepieces.—Chicago Record-Herald.

THE RAILROAD SCARE

ODD EFFECTS OF THE FIRST SIGHT OF A LOCOMOTIVE.

Some of the People of the South Hid Behind Trees in 1833, When the Iron Horse Went By—The Country's Earliest Railroad.

America cannot lay claim to the first locomotive or the first railroad. That great honor lies with England. Yet Yankee genius was not very far behind her; for, when George Stephenson launched his first real locomotive, the Rocket, on the Liverpool and Manchester road in 1825, the first spike had been driven on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, July 4, 1828, by Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence. This was the first road started in the United States, and in 1830 it had reached Elliott Mills, 13 miles from Baltimore.

But the south can claim the honor of completing the longest railroad in the world at that date, being the old Charleston and Hamburg road, now a part of the South Carolina and Georgia system, which was begun in 1830, and by October, 1833, it had 137 miles of track in operation. In a letter from Mr. Samuel C. Clarke of Georgia, kinsman of the writer, who attained the extreme age of 91 years and who had seen the beginning and the completion of this road, he thus gives his experience upon first sight of a locomotive:

"One day while going down to Charleston with a party of gentlemen to attend the races as we approached the city we saw in the distance the new railroad, finished some 10 or 12 miles out of Charleston. It was built upon piles, longer or shorter, according to the nature of the ground. Sometimes in crossing a ravine the rails were 20 feet from the surface. Our track ran near this elevated road, and soon a horrid shriek as from 20 panthers was heard in the woods. By this time we were nervous. Elephants and lions we had heard of, and some of us had seen them, but what monster was this whose screams we heard? Presently it came in sight, flying aloft through the air and breathing fire and smoke, and our frightened steeds became unmanageable, and in fact I think that some of our party were as badly frightened as their horses. If any of my readers are old enough to remember the introduction of locomotives and how they felt at first sight of them, they will perhaps understand our sensations that day in the pine woods.

"A mile or two farther on we came to a broken wagon by the side of the road, and near it sat a Georgia cracker smoking his pipe. On being asked what was the matter he replied, 'Well, stranger, I've often heard tell of malification, and now I reckon I've saw it for true.'"

It is somewhat amusing now to read of the superstitious dread with which the inhabitants looked upon the building of these first railroads. Some thought the smoke of the continual passing trains would cause a pestilence or destroy all the crops along the road. Others were afraid to ride on the cars for fear of having their breath taken away, and the people in the cities objected to the railroad being built because they feared the smoke from the engines would soil the clothes which were hung out to dry.

Many are yet living who looked upon the terrible, screeching iron monster with awe and trepidation. Mr. Nat McGee of Troy, Alabama, tells a joke upon himself that when he heard the train coming he jumped from his horse and got behind a tree, where he cowered for fear of being run over. Mr. W. T. Prout, who was taking a wagon load of produce to Richmond, when he reached Conduchee heard the whistle and terrible noise of the approaching train, and he and his companions were so scared that they sprang out, leaped the fence and ran across the field to a safe distance, leaving the wagon and team to its fate. But when the train appeared it was only an engine and one coach. The first roadbeds were formed, as has been stated, by driving piles in the ground, upon the top of which were placed wooden stringers, in which were cut a groove for the wheels to run. These were called "wooden railroads," and at a distance appeared like the elevated railroads in the cities of the present day. The honor of this invention was contested between John Hartman of Scotlandville, La., and John Williams, an engineer of Ohio, but it did not give a triumph to either, for the wheels were constantly bouncing out of the groove, and the piles soon after gave place to solid dirt embankments, and strap iron rails were substituted for the wooden groove. But the grading was very imperfect and uneven, which made riding on one of these primitive railroads like going over a corduroy road in a springless wagon, with the cars bouncing over these rough rails to the jingling music of the windows.—Richmond Dispatch.

Do Carpets Shorten Life?

Just think that a horrible receptacle of unclean things the carpet is in the rich English or French house! Where there are carpets, people should on entering be given slippers, as in the Netherlands, or the footbath, as at a Turkish mosque. Making servants sweep carpets is another proof that evil is wrought for want of thought. Fluorosis attributed the prevalence of lung and throat diseases in England to carpeted rooms.—London Truth.

The East Tennessee Telephone Company.

About nine months ago the East Tennessee Telephone Company purchased the local telephone plant in this city and county, and since that time have made such a distinct improvement that today Paris has one of the best telephone plants in the country. There has been and cannot be any increase in the toll rates. On the contrary, the rates have been considerably reduced. It has only been a short time since the rate to Millersburg was 25 cents. Now it is only ten cents, and is free to all subscribers.

The plant in North Middletown will soon be in operation, and when it is completed the service will be free to all subscribers and only 15 cents to non-subscribers. Their service at the present time extends over almost the entire county. There is hardly a farm house of any consequence in the county that is not supplied with a telephone. It is now possible for you to sit at your desk and call up and converse with almost any farmer in the adjoining counties.

When one realizes the vast difference between the service of the East Tennessee Company and that which they were receiving before, we feel that the citizens of Paris should be under obligations to this corporation. They are at present operating three hundred and fifty telephones in this city, and it will only be a matter of a couple of weeks when the number will reach four hundred.

The large number of men in their employ necessary to build and maintain such a plant, have without hardly an exception proven themselves to be gentlemen and good citizens, and have been valuable additions to our society.

In all probability the East Tennessee Company will in the near future purchase ground and erect a telephone building which will accommodate the increasing demands upon the service, and will also be a valuable addition to the city. The News has said before, and it now reiterates the assertion, that as long as the East Tennessee Company continues to give the people of Paris and Bourbon county the perfect telephone service they are now receiving, they should be encouraged by every known means.

Asphalt Streets for Paris

When the contemplated system of sewers for Paris are put in it would be an excellent idea for our city officials to investigate the feasibility of putting down asphalt streets. Mayor Duncan and a committee of Lexington citizens have returned from Carter county, where they went to inspect the asphalt fields. They were very much impressed with the quality of the asphalt, and it is altogether probable Lexington will have asphalt in the near future.

Asphalt streets are the cheapest and by far the best streets that can be adopted by a city. From a health standpoint they are superior to all others. They can be kept perfectly clean at all times. The freedom from noise is another great point in their favor. The close proximity of these large fields of asphalt, and the fact that they are on the line of the L. & N. railroad, should also be taken into consideration. It is hoped the City Council will consider this question seriously.

Early Closing Movement.

Last night the dry goods stores of L. Frank and G. Tucker were closed at 6:30 o'clock and will continue to do so until the fall season opens. There is a movement on foot to induce all the principal merchants to do likewise, and it is a movement which should receive the hearty co-operation of every citizen of Paris. The News will publish in its next issue the names of all firms who agree to the early closing. So far all the stores, excepting one, have signed the agreement. It is not intended to include the groceries in the list.

SNOKE the Stoner. Made in Paris and none better.

HINTON'S mammoth stock of wall paper will be sacrificed for the next few days to make room for his fall stock. Bargain prices will prevail.

Mr. Talbott Non-Committal.

A News man interviewed Mr. W. F. Talbott last night and asked him the question whether he intended to make the race for Mayor or withdraw. Mr. Talbott's answer in part was as follows: "Inasmuch as I have not yet announced myself a candidate, I do not feel called upon to announce my withdrawal. As to whether I will enter the race or not before the 1st of August (the time limit) is another question, and one which I am not prepared at present to answer. I would prefer to have more time to consider the matter and talk with my friends before answering."

Bindery Girls Strike.

The five bindery girls employed by the Transylvania Printing Company, in Lexington, went out on a strike Saturday evening and yesterday the various unions discussed the advisability of striking in sympathy. The girls do not belong to any union and may not be assisted. The company advertised for girls to take their places Sunday.

WANTED—One hundred thousand bushels of bluegrass seed.

Herrmann the Great.

The present "Herrmann the Great," "Leon" is the most expert conjurer the world has ever known. His sleight of hand and palming borders on the marvelous. For his engagement in this city an entirely new and novel program of magic and mystery has been arranged. Magic never before seen in this city and so marvelous and grand that only he, the master "Herrmann" himself, would attempt. Several sensational illusions are also on the program, which are inexplicable and unexplainable.

School Money.

The County School Superintendent will receive $2.50 per capita for 1890-1901. Bourbon county is credited with 5,382 children of school age, and will receive from the State $13,455. This will be paid in four installments—40 per cent. on October 1st, and 31 per cent. on the first of each of the three succeeding months.

Stock And Crop.

Despite the local thunderstorms accompanied by slight rainfall in Western Missouri Saturday night, the drought is burning up vegetation in Missouri, Kansas and Texas. There is no relief in sight and the situation becomes worse each hour. Several days ago one-fourth of the corn crop in Kansas was hoped for. The estimate now must be still further reduced. Prayers for rain were offered in scores of churches in Missouri and Kansas Sunday.

OBITUARY.

Barton W. Soper, a wealthy and well known bachelor of the Little Rock neighborhood, died on Sunday afternoon aged 75 years.

The Girl Of To-Day.

It is very lamentable the way mothers are raising their daughters now-a-days. It matters not whether she is rich or poor, the girl of the present day is taught to do nothing. She spends her time practically in dressing and gadding. She grows up on the streets, and she mother shields herself behind the fresh air hobby when her conscience takes her to task. In olden times when girls were raised with the view of becoming good and useful women, wives and mothers, they were healthier by far than the girl of the present day, daintier, and as a rule prettier, though they spent much of their time indoors engaged in the homely diversion of sewing and the healthy occupation of household work.

E. B. January Withdraws

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF PARIS: The City Committee decided last Friday that the recent Primary Election held in this city was illegal and void, and called another election. I thought that every man who was a candidate at said primary stood in exactly the same attitude as he did before the election was held and I immediately announced myself as a candidate for Police Judge.

But after due deliberation I have concluded that the best interest of the Democracy early will be promoted by my withdrawal, and I now withdraw from the race. Thanking my many friends for their loyal support, and pledging a hearty support to my successful opponent, Mr. E. T. Hinton, I am,
Very truly,
E. B. JANUARY.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mother and grandmother never thought of using anything else for indigestion or Bilelessness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of Appendicitis, Nervous Prostration or Heart failure, etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied that there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac—W. T. Brooks
